AZHSRI is structured upon the research of Breaking Ranks II (Brown University) and the presentation provided an overview of the three core areas of Breaking Ranks II. Dr. Butterfield emphasized that middle/high schools can utilize these recommendations in the school improvement process as "entry points", which allow school leaders flexibility in deciding which strategies best meet individual school community needs. Dr. Butterfield also covered the Department's next steps, including ADE's upcoming '06-'07 AZHSRI summits and Breaking Ranks II trainings. The Council engaged in Q&A with Dr. Butterfield following the presentation.

4. Presentation: The Partnership for 21st Century Skills

Ken Kay, President of the Partnership for 21st Century Skills, briefed the Council on how the high school reform movement should fully and strategically integrate 21st century knowledge, skills and assessment. Mr. Kay discussed importance of how critical thinking, problem solving, innovation skills, communication skills, collaborative skills, global awareness and self-direction should become the new “design specs” for 21st Century education in Arizona. Mr. Kay then provided seven recommendations for the Council to consider as it works to develop the framework for education modernization: 1. Develop a consensus among the key stakeholders on the 21st century skills needed by Arizona students; 2. Create a teacher professional development strategy for 21st century skills; 3. Imbed 21st century skills in core subjects; 4. Upgrade assessments by including high-stakes, classroom assessments, senior projects and student portfolios to measure 21st century skills; 5. Focus on reforming high schools and on the results that matter in the 21st century and redefine rigor to include 21st century skills; 6. Collaborate with the business community; and 7. Collaborate with community-based groups. The Council engaged in a Q&A with Mr. Kay following the presentation.

5. Committee Updates

Debra Raeder indicated that the Committee draft recommendations and work plans are a culmination of the work of the Council; the goals and recommendations from the Retreat in June; and regular meetings of each of the committees. All of the draft recommendations as well as specific steps to achieve these goals have been provided in the Council packet.

Each Committee chair provided a brief overview of the Committee draft recommendations with committee members providing additional input and comment to the discussion. Council members and the public will have 10 days to review the recommendations in detail and provide comment to staff by Monday, November 27, 2006.

The area drawing the most discussion was the Communications Committee recommendation to alter the vision statement. The Communications Committee is recommending it be revised to read: Every graduating student from the freshman class of 2012 will be prepared for work and post-secondary education in the 21st Century.

Other areas garnering discussion were:

- The current draft recommendation from the Education Alignment Committee for three years of high school math and should it be changed to four years of math or reflect a timeframe for raising the math graduation requirement to four years.
- In addition to the issue of “how much” math, the Council discussed recommending a sequencing of math courses and/or that the senior year having a capstone math course.
- Implementing a college readiness assessment the junior year. The Council re-emphasized the need to try and implement an assessment in the junior year that will provide an indicator to students on how well prepared they are for higher education giving students the senior year to make education adjustments and/or remediation as necessary. Success on such an exam could then be the impetus for students to move on to concurrent classes, early high school graduation, or enrollment at the community colleges to get a jumpstart on college education.
- The Council requested that they be provided with the information from the study conducted by the Governor’s Committee on Teacher Quality and Support on teacher pay.

Final recommendations will be made at the December 12th meeting for approval by the Council.
